

ALAN JAGOE, IMMEDIATE PAST PRESIDENT OF CEJA

Alan Jagoe is a dairy and cereal farmer who farms in a family farm partnership with his father and brother on the south coast of County Cork, Ireland. Alan was very involved at a local level of the Irish Young Farmers movement (Macra na Feirme) and was elected as their National President in 2011 for a two year term. Upon completion in 2013 Alan was elected as a Vice President of CEJA – the European Council of Young farmers, which represent 2 million young farmers across the EU. Alan was subsequently elected President of CEJA in September 2015 and has just recently finished his term. Alan also sits on the Teagasc Authority (Irish state body responsible for agricultural education, advisory and research). Alan is also involved with an agricultural charity called Agri-Aware who are involved in educating the Irish public and schools on the importance of agri-food.
